It is not improbable that the bombardment of the Chinhai fortress bas been dictated by a desire on the part of Admiral Counser to make a run up the river in quest of the cruisers which have hitherto sluded his pursuit. The gallant Admiral would hardly have attacked the Chinhai fortress merely for the sake of destroying it; he evidently has confidence in his ability to essays and proposals on the subject of taxation, when she struck on Flat Island I was just about clear the barriers placed in the river and to get up to the cruisers after he has si- urgent needs of the Chinese Empire. The rout was complete, and about 1,500 Chinese were killed. The citadel and works even at that date were mounted with good guns, and the Chinese have since materially strengthened the fortifications and improved the armament. At that the French have silenced the forts. According to Chinese report, however, one of the French vessels has been disabled. If the guns in the Chinhai fortress are as good as those in the forts in the Kimpsi Pass, it is quite possible that a French man-of-war has sustained serious injury, but it is just as probable that the damage is of a kind easily repairable. As we have intimated, it is not to be supposed that Admiral Counser's purpose was merely to silence the Chinhai forts. He has ulterior purposes, and the capture or destruction of the escaped cruisers is obviously the principal of these. TURNING OF THE FIRST SOD OF THE BOWEN PARK

The 27th February was the day fixed for the inauguration of a work which the community have tion with them long wished to see commenced, namely, the transformation of the swamp enclosed by the Racecourse into a public park. The plan it is intended to adopt in the laying out of the grounds is indicated in the speech of the Hon. J. M Price, Surveyor-General, reported below. However, all these matters will not be left to the decision of Peking. If the Chinese troops at Lang. son, from 40 to 60,000, should be captured or dispersed in the impending attack, France will not discuss the Annam-Tonquin question, but will enforce her designs. On the other hand, if, as might be, a serious disaster occurred to the French troops as a result of the diagonal march of the second Chinese army new in movement, a disaster that would not be reviewed until the autumnal season as the time of rains and floods will come in six weeks—the French nation would be greatly inconsed and excited, and $ strenuous effort would be made, at all costs, to overwhelm the resistance of the Chinese Empire. In the meanwhile the official and people of China have been prepared for the inevitable changes in the ways of government. Many reforms are in gestation, and some are at work. The army is undergoing a thorough change, and the forces of Chihli, when reorganized, will serve as an exemplary pattern to the other 17 provinces. The navy has also been taken in hand,

And to manage a ship of war now always requires both officers and man to be thoroughly well trained to their duties. At an early time the same state of things will have to be encountered in the armies of all the provinces, but with care and patience the officers of the armies, such as they are, can be adapted to serve all temporary purposes. To fight a ship requires a scientific training, as the art of navigation, the methods of the steam engine, the management of the heavy guis, &c., require education. But in the army—for the present at least—less argent need is felt for the modern European arts of war, and as the conflicts in Tonquin and Formosa will, considering the couditions of things, be carried out by irregular strategy, the Chinese Empire can wait a while for the creation of a scientific military school Just now all that is wanted is the erection of stockades, the blocking of passes, quick movement, ample supply of arms and amunition, and a free expenditure of men. Given these requirements the French can be harassed, andperhaps-ancossfully resisted, especially as the Chinese commanders seem to have comprehendd of late the rulimentary principles of war. Some of the recent marches, retreats, and combined movements were very clever, and show that the errors taught by those excellent soldiers Briere de l'Isle and Nagrier, have been compre-
